DID YOU KNOW that a stele (pronounced stee-lee) is an upright stone slab with an inscribed or sculptured surface, used as a monument or as a commemorative piece? The Code of Hammurabi is perhaps the most famous, on which Babylonian laws were written.

Katherine Downey, Senior Lecturer in Arts & Humanities, and friend view a stele in the British Museum, London, 2003.

International Education Programs

PROGRAMS

We are excited that you are interested in studying abroad as it is an opportunity that allows for personal growth, a time to develop new insights into other cultures and an opportunity to enhance your global knowledge.

The Office of International Education assists students in the process of choosing a study abroad program through a third-party provider that best meets the desires and needs of each individual student. These providers offer the greatest selection of schools and countries to choose from, and these programs facilitate the study abroad experience for students, often offering amenities such as meals and excursions.

The following programs have proven to be the most popular among UTD students and are programs that our office recommends:

KEI: Knowledge Exchange Institute was founded in 1997 to promote international education, professional development and cultural exchange through specialized study and intern abroad programs. Most KEI programs have an internship, research, and/or field studies component in addition to classroom instruction. The subject-specific coursework allows students to complete major academic requirements while enhancing their understanding of the world through internships, community service, cultural activities and social interactions.
