Living Learning Communities

Welcome to the inaugural year of Living Learning Communities at UTD?

What is a Living Learning Community (LLC)?

Living Learning Communities include small groups of select freshmen who share common academic objectives, goals, and interests. Students involved in these communities:

- live in the same apartment building,
- attend a class together, and
- participate as a group in various social activities such as service learning and specialized off-campus events.

What are the goals of LLC?

- extend learning outside the classroom,
- build community, and
- foster connections among students, staff, and faculty.

At The University of Texas at Dallas there are currently three freshman communities:

- Pre-Health
- Pre-Law
- Civic Engagement (Service Learning)

The students in the Pre-Health community are those focused on entering the health professions, such as medical, dental, or pharmacy. Students in Pre-Law are interested in attending law school. Those students involved in the Civic Engagement community are focused on nonprofit professions, public service, and volunteerism.
