General Course Information

Course Description Leading for good is a leadership class to prepare students to generate positive change – whether in their organization, their community, or the world around them.

- Course Objectives
- Develop personal leadership skills through increased emotional intelligence.
 - The course will host successful and interesting people, and students will have the opportunity to understand their stories and journey to success, as defined by the individual. It is important to have a rich understanding of people and their career paths so students can apply the lessons and insights the speakers share to their own lives and goals.

Required Texts & Materials Primal Leadership: Unleashing the Power of Emotional Intelligence. By Daniel Goleman, Richard Blyatzi and Annie McKee. Harvard Business Review Press. 2013

The Art of Control: Developing your Intelligent Emotions and Managing Your Life. Gerald Hannah, The Ledlie Group. Will be provided. Do not buy it in advance.

Suggested Texts, Readings, & Materials Others as suggested by speakers

Grading: Each component is worth 50% of total grade

- Discussion/Class participation: Because this is an interactive class, learning depends on attendance. Attendance at all class meetings is expected and should be considered mandatory. Students will be allowed one unexcused absence.
- Individual Development Plan. You should focus on your short-term and long-term objectives and a plan (including leadership components) for accomplishing them. This project is intended to help you think seriously about what you want to accomplish in your personal and professional career. You should reflect on what you have learned throughout the course from others to guide your thoughts. No more than four pages.
