Course Pre-requisites, Co-requisites, and/or Other Restrictions

There are no formal prerequisites for this course. General academic skills of analytical thinking, comparison, essay writing, working with statistical material, map reading will be helpful. Previous coursework in Demographics or Introduction to World Geographic Regions is not essential but definitely helpful for this course. If you have not taken either of these please let me know.

Course Description

This course will explore human migrations and their consequences for societies. We will analyze the reasons of international migration, geography of migrant flows, and relationship between migration and the development of the places of origin. The course will examine labor migration, movements of displaced people as well as new types of mobility such as moves for education, marriage, retirement or in search of new life styles. Migration and security issues that have become a part of the concern of modern governments will also be discussed.

Student Learning Objectives/Outcomes

Students will learn fundamentals of migration process and how they apply to interpretation of modern migration flows. The students will appreciate migration as a key dynamic within globalization as it plays an essential part in economic and social change and contributes to a transformation of the international political order. Acquire the skill to analyze economic, social, and cultural implications of migration based on composition and geography of migrant flows. Students will engage in discussions how migration may affect bilateral and regional relations, security, national identity and sovereignty. Map reading will be reinforced.

This class will fulfill your C3 oral communication course requirement, should you choose to apply for the Certificate (<http://oue.utdallas.edu/home/c3/>).

Required Textbooks and Materials

The Age of Migration: International Population Movement in the Modern World, 5th Edition by Stephen Castles, Hein De Haas, and Mark J. Miller. The Guilford Press, 2013. ISBN-9781462513116.

Suggested Course Materials

Students are expected to take notes during PowerPoint presentations and complete assignments before due dates. Lecture material shall be complimented by reading the appropriate chapters in the book. It is suggested that students make it a daily habit to read a reputable daily newspaper online or in print. This will help relate learning with contemporary events and provide deeper understanding into class material.

Course & Instructor Policies

Attendance is crucial for the successful learning and will be taken each class. Many of my lectures and our discussions will include materials not found in the text. As a result a good set of class notes will be extremely helpful if you plan excelling in this course. If you missed a class the notes should be made as you read the assigned chapter in the book. Attendance will be encouraged by 1 bonus point for the PERFECT attendance. No makeup tests. (Individual consideration may be given in case of overwhelming circumstances). Although extra help may be provided to students, the professor will not hold alternate lectures or release lecture notes to students. Respectful discussions of the topics being studied are encouraged.
